

SOS Designs

Photo above (l-r): Sherry, who handmade many of the products sold at the festival, and her mother, browse through the purses on display.

SOS Industries, a division of SRVS, has always had the vision of creating a line of products made by people with disabilities. From this vision, and countless hours of research and planning, SOS Designs was born. Since its inception, SOS service recipients have been working non-stop on boutique style crafts to sell to the public. On September 12th, they launched their products at the Germantown Festival amid all the other craft vendors. Dozens of people of all ages and walks of life stopped by the booth to shop and learn more about SRVS and SOS Industries. The hottest sellers were the cell phone pouches which come in a variety of fabrics and accents making each one a unique gift.

